The Craftſman prov'd to be the Spirit of Faction, and Mr. Oldcaſtle condemn'd on his own Principles.

To the AUTHOR of the WEEKLY REGISTER.

SIR,

THE Authors of the Craftſman have already been charg'd with a long Series of political Lying, and the Proof has frequently been made from the Folly and Abſurdity of their own Aſſertions. Were a Falſhood ever ſo notorious, if it anſwer'd their Intentions from one Week to the other, that is, if it ſow'd Miſchief among the People, till another was ready to ſucceed it, they had their Ends, and the Infamy and Immorality of ſuch a Practice was never regarded; they rightly judg'd they had no Reputation to loſe, and as to the Injury that might reſult by it to other Perſons, 'twas their very Deſign in publiſhing it.——Their Wickedneſs reſembles what is fabled of Witchcraft, it falls alike upon the Innocent and the Guilty, a Straw in the Way is ſufficient Provocation, and then all the Elements are hurried into a Storm to aſſiſt their Vengeance. They are both alike implacable in their Hatred, unwearied in the Perſuit of Revenge, and in Torture till they have gratified their abominable Reſentments.

Hypocriſy of the moſt aggravated Kind is likewiſe laid to their Charge with equal Juſtice, and is ſupported with equal Demonſtration; they have aſſum'd the glorious Name of Patriot, to conceal that of Traitor, and have declaim'd on Liberty to propagate Rebellion. This is not a fictitious, or imaginary Accuſation, but ſupported with fatal Proofs, which, for their Sakes, I wiſh never had a Being; let Mr. Oldcaſtle's Minutes juſtify me in one Part of it, and the ANSWER to the Remarks in the other: but as I deſign to be more particular, I deſire only to be heard impartially, and if any Thing of this Nature has been advanc'd before, let this be conſider'd as a Supplement which the late Behaviour of the Faction has render'd neceſſary, in Juſtification of thoſe who have more Loyalty, than to reliſh their Inſults to the Throne, and have too great a Regard for their Country, to be betray'd into an Eſteem of thoſe Actions, which every Man of Senſe and Honour would condemn.

Mr. Oldcaſtle has taken abundance of Pains to diſtinguiſh between a Spirit of Liberty, and a Spirit of Faction, has aſſerted two different Kinds of Treaſon, one of the People againſt the Crown, the other of the Crown againſt the People. For a Proof of this he has given us a long Proceſs of Remarks upon the Engliſh Hiſtory, the whole Deſign of which was to inſinuate a Parallel between their Oppoſition of the Court, and the Spirit of Liberty that animated our greateſt Patriots; between the preſent Reign, and the moſt infamous of former Ages: I appeal to every Man's Integrity and Underſtanding, to witneſs that theſe Minutes were calculated only for this Purpoſe, and can be conſider'd in no other View.——Mr. Oldcaſtle himſelf has put all favourable Interpretations out of our Power, by digreſſing frequently from his Subject to explain his Intention, and torture Circumſtances to compliment his Patron's Reſentment; thus his very Recommendation of the Spirit of Liberty is made the Tool of Faction, and what is inforc'd as a moſt heroical Virtue, is made a Proſtitute to the moſt infamous Vice.——The Peace of a Society is to be confounded in Compliment to Patriotiſm, and new Revolutions diſtract us in Honour of the Love of Liberty.

But let us ſuppoſe our Conſtitution was ſo corrupted, and our Freedoms and Privileges ſo much indanger'd, that an Oppoſition was abſolutely neceſſary to ſecure us from Deſtruction, and prevent all ſuch Calamities for the future; have theſe pretended Patriots acted in any one Circumſtance as if their ſole Endeavour was to recover the Advantages we had loſt, or confirm us in the Poſſeſſion of the Remainder? Have they ever appear'd wiſe, and diſcreet in the Proſecution of ſuch a Deſign, or honeſt, and diſintereſted with Regard to the Event, whenever it ſhould take Place? Did the Source of their Reſentments proceed from any particular Abuſe of Power, from any remarkable Outrage to the People? Did they reſign their Places in Complaiſance to the common Cauſe, or in the Conviction they could not retain them with Honour? Have they acted with that Coolneſs, and Moderation which is neceſſary to the Character they have aſſum'd, or have they ever once paus'd to reflect on the fatal Conſequences of a divided Nation? No, they have made their Zeal for the Nation, the Plea for their Diſaffection, and have endeavour'd to alienate the Hearts of the People from their Sovereign, to unite them to themſelves.——However, let us ſuppoſe them ſincere in their Intentions, juſt in their Principles, and heroic in their Reſolutions; but then how lamely, how idly have they ſupported their Cauſe! how little Progreſs have they made in doing Juſtice to their Country! The greater the Corruption they oppos'd, the Guilt they would puniſh, the more ſeverely it reflects Confuſion, and Ignominy on them for being ſo ſlow in redreſſing Grievances, or ſo ignorant in the Means of effecting it.——Yet ſhall theſe very People, who glory in the Goodneſs of their Cauſe, and the Notoriety of the Facts they complain of, ſhall they inſult the Miniſtry with the ill Succeſs of public Negotiations, that depend on ſuch a Variety of Intereſts, ſuch complicated Meaſures, ſhall they openly ſtile them Blunderers, without incurring all the Ridicule ſuch Folly deſerves? when theſe very Blunderers have defeated all their Meaſures, confounded all their Devices, and reduc'd them even to a Deſpondency, that 'tis poſſible may end in Madneſs, if we may judge of the future by what is paſt; while they themſelves with all their boaſted Advantages, have only labour'd themſelves into all the Averſion, and Contempt, they intended others.

Was it the Spirit of Liberty that inſpir'd the ANSWER to the Remarks? was Faction wholy a Stranger to its Author? Is there any Man impudent enough to anſwer Yes? If there is, he muſt be a Stranger to Facts, Truth, and Reaſon; he muſt be wholy blinded with Party-Rage, and every turbulent Paſſion that is peculiar to the Faction he belongs to.——What have the idle ridiculous Tales, or the ſerious ſanguinary Vows of Vengeance, that are the Compoſition of that Piece, to do with natural Redreſs, and legal Juſtice? Are theſe the beſt Proofs of a public Spirit? are theſe the genuin Features of Patriotiſm? Let me appeal to the People of England, let me ask if they diſtinguiſh'd one Hint of Honeſty, one Start of Diſcretion thro' the whole Libel? On the contrary, the moſt rigid Advocates for Liberty, the moſt avow'd Enemies to the Adminiſtration, are aſham'd of an Author, that has betray'd their Cauſe, and only meant himſelf, when he pretended a Concern for the Nation. They give him up to Ignominy, to Scorn, to Contempt, for being ſo rude, ſo vain, ſo faithleſs, and unjuſt; they imagin'd their Cauſe had a nobler Foundation than private Spleen, and expected a more generous Advocate.——But great was the Diſappointment, and their Reſentments are equal.——They publickly call this intreaguing Cabal a Faction, and warmly diſavow their infamous Deſigns; they recal their Hope, their Truſt, their Confidence, from ſuch abandon'd Agents, and confide wholy in his MAJESTY, their King, their Father, their natural and reaſonable Protection, the Guard of their true Intereſts, and the Champion for their Laws and Liberties.——The loweſt, the meaneſt Briton who is inform'd of theſe Events, expreſſes his Indignation at their Authors, and bluſhes that his Country ſhould produce ſuch deteſtable Characters.——He bleſſes the Humbleneſs of his own Fortune, that preſerves him from ſuch treacherous Friendſhip, and would make his Confidence the Means of his Ruin.——Let the Faction conſider this, and be aſham'd; let their Advocate be confounded at the Virtue that is his Condemnation: Let all Mankind avoid ſo dire a Correſpondence.——No one is ſafe in Friendſhip, if future Miſunderſtandings authorize the Diſcovery of former Converſations; or, what is infinitely worſe, the inventing Circumſtances to ſupply the Place of Truth, and creating Lies in ſtark Oppoſition to all Honour and Fidelity.——Such is the Circumſtance of this Author, and ſuch the Spirit of Liberty Mr. Oldcaſtle has made it his Buſineſs to recommend.

HELI, the Turkiſh Traveller, to the late PRIME VIZIER; on his Encouragement of Learning, and his Love to the Sciences.

MOST illuſtrious Miniſter! great Repreſentative of the Ottoman Majeſty! and Support of that mighty Empire which ſhall endure thro' all Generations! may thy Power be eſtabliſh'd at the right Hand of the ſublime Sultan! the Shadow of Heaven! may thy Days be lengthened for the Good of Mankind! and thy Glory continue to the End of Time!——The Chriſtian Advices from the Port, have frequently delighted me with the Fame of thy Zeal for Knowledge, and thy Munificence to the Sons of Wiſdom and Underſtanding; they ſtile thee a Wonder among the Muſſulman Princes, and reproach thy Predeceſſors with the Want of that Delicacy, which has done Honour to thee in the remoteſt Regions.——Thy Friend Heli intereſts himſelf in all thy Praiſes, and feels the Benefit of thy Virtue even in a Land of Enemies and Unbelievers; the Nazarenes affect a profound Eſteem for Learning and Politeneſs, and behave to Strangers according to the Reputation of their Country.——Thou haſt added a new Credit to thine, and the loweſt Slave who worſhips at the Grand Seignor's Footſtool ſhall bleſs thee, when he owes the Lenity of foreign Nations, and the Improvement of his own Mind intirely to thy Beneficence.——Believe me, magnificent Stateſman! my Heart glows with Pleaſure, like thine, when I hear of the ſmalleſt Circumſtance that is a real Service to my Country; I feel the ſacred Impulſe kindling every Faculty into a Rapture, that allows of no Compariſon; the Tenderneſs due to a Parent, the Tranſport that is inſpir'd by Beauty, the delicate and diſintereſted Regard of Friendſhip, the ſacred Pleaſure of divine Philoſophy are Images infinitely too faint to expreſs the generous Enthuſiaſm that poſſeſſes me, when I reflect on my Country's Happineſs.——Nothing but my Zeal for the ever-holy and unpolluted Aiſa is, in any Degree, its Rival, and, when I vary the Theme of my Contemplation from one to the other, 'tis only to trace the God-Head from the Workmanſhip of his Hands, to the Sum of his Perfections, and again from his Attributes to the everlaſting Tide of Indulgence that flows perpetually from them.——Suffer me to congratulate thee on the true Method thou haſt taken to make thy Fellow-Creatures happy, and give thyſelf Immortality; the Voice of the Learned is the only Trumpet of Fame, and, if they are encourag'd by thy Smiles, they will make every Science glory in thy Applauſe: Whereas, if the Muſes are ſuffer'd to languiſh without Countenance or Regard, the Stateſman contrives, and the Soldier executes in vain; an illiterate Age is a Blank in the Records of Time; Fable and Imagination ſupply the Place of Truth, Kings and Princes die in Obſcurity, and become as if they had never been.——Savageneſs and Barbarity ſucceed to Humanity and Politeneſs; Men naturally ruſt into Baſeneſs of Mind and Action, and an univerſal Veil is drawn over the Face of Virtue: Such an Æra is the Night of Wiſdom, and the Sleep of Glory: Nothing but a Genius, like thine, can rouze it from its Slumber, can bid the Day of Wiſdom dawn upon the Nations, can draw the Veil from the Face of Virtue, and poliſh Mankind into Politeneſs and Humanity.——Perſue the noble Undertaking with the Spirit of an Hero, oppoſe Difficulties, and ſurmount Oppoſition, make the Good of the Public the ſole End of thy Endevours, and Knowledge the Means to effect it; our Holy Prophet ſhall be the Star to point out thy Way, and his Paradiſe the Reward of thy Reſolution.——As much as the Nazarenes have piqu'd themſelves on their Learning, and the Refinement of their Manners, I can aſſure thee that the Angel of Wiſdom is about to forſake them, and a Spirit of Indolence and Luxury, Ignorance and Error, prevails in his ſtead; their Nobles are no longer the Ornament of their Country, nor their Princes the Delight of the Muſes; they are ſinking into Effeminacy and Obſcurity together, and the Voice of Honour bewails their Ruin.——Let thy penetrating Spirit take the Advantage of their Degeneracy, and make the faithful Muſſulmans acquainted with the Happineſs they have forfeited: The Orient was once the Fountain of Learning, the Spring of Science, from whence the whole World receiv'd its Wiſdom, and its Laws; do thou reſtore it to its ancient Glory, make it now the Ocean of Underſtanding, and let all the Rivers of the Univerſe empty themſelves into its Boſom.——'Tis an Employment fit for an elevated Soul, and honourable in the ſublimeſt Character; let thy Example be a Law to all the Princes who kiſs the Hem of thy Veſtment, and a Diſgrace to the Chriſtian Name who voluntarily reſign'd ſo great an Advantage.——This is an Emulation worthy a Hero, worthy a God, none but Gods and Heroes are capable of ſuch Sentiments, and whoever puts them in Execution is both.——This is the moſt effectual Way to ſubdue the Reſidue of the World, and give Laws to the Ends of the Earth, for Wiſdom will always prevail over Ignorance, and Bravery be ſuperiour to Corruption.——But, laying aſide Ambition, there is a real Glory in contending for the Palm of Knowledge and Virtue; were all the Nations of the Globe to make this the Motive of their Debates, inſtead of the little vexacious Trifles that are now the Subject of their higheſt Cares; 'twould be infinitely more to the Honour of Princes, and the Happineſs of their People.——Quarrelling for Empire is fooliſh, cruel, and unjuſt; but a mutual Emulation for the Good of Mankind would baniſh half the Evils of Life from among the People, and make Princes great indeed.

FOREIGN NEWS.

HAGUE, July 17. N. S. The Affair of the Acceſſion of this State to the Treaty of Vienna, remains under a Sort of Suſpenſion, till the Return of the Courier that carried to Vienna their High-Mightineſſes Ultimatum, who is expected back about the Beginning of next Week. Mean Time, there is no room to doubt, but the States of Holland, who will be then aſſembled, will make an End of that Affair before they ſeparate; that their Conſent will be followed by that of all the other United Provinces; and ſo the Acceſſion of the Republick remain an infallible Conſequence. Thus it is not France that retards the Concluſion of this great Affair, as her Partiſans here affect to give out. The Prince of Eaſt-Frieſland has lately taken a Step, which makes a great Noiſe, and will go near to draw down upon him the Reſentment of the Emperor, as well as of this State. The Couriers and Poſt-Boys have been ſeized by his Order, the Mails open'd, and the Pacquets taken out, which were directed by their High-Mightineſſes to the Magiſtrates of Embden. That Prince has even carried his Curioſity ſuch a violent Length, as to open the Letters of the Merchants of Amſterdam to their Correſpondence in Eaſt-Frieſland. Thoſe Merchants have thereupon complained to the State, and their High-Mightineſſes (who look upon this Violation of the Law of Nations as a groſs Affront) have in Conſequence taken a Reſolution upon that Subject, which ſhews a juſt Reſentment. All our Letters from France continue full of the Reſentment of that Crown, which (they ſay) is ready to burſt upon the Kingdom of Great Britain. They would perſuade us, that his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty will make Uſe of the King of Spain, notwithſtanding his Declaration, to revenge the Injury he imagines he has received from the Hands of the Engliſh: That in order hereunto, the important Fortreſs of Gibraltar (Gibraltar which ſecures the Engliſh Shipping from the Corſairs of Barbary, and makes the Veſſels of that Nation the Carriers of Europe up the Streights) is ſhut in cloſer and cloſer by Sea and Land, with the Deſign to render it uſeleſs to the Engliſh: That the General Count de Montemar ſet out no longer ago than the 16th ult. by Order of his Catholick Majeſty, to go directly to the Camp before Gibraltar, and to give ſome Directions, too important to be entruſted by an ordinary Courier: That the ſaid Camp is to be conſiderably reinforced, more Troops being commanded thither from different Parts; and leſt any Thing ſhould be wanting, a great Sum of Money has been ſent thither, to pay the Soldiers all that is due to them: Laſtly, that they work without Intermiſſion upon the Forts which are building at certain Diſtances, and are almoſt in a Condition not to fear any Thing, being well enough provided with Cannon, to keep that Fortreſs in a Manner blocked up; to ſecond which, there are ſeveral flat-bottom'd Veſſels and Spaniſh Galleys continually cruizing at the Mouth of the Bay. Add to theſe Preparations, thoſe which are carrying on in France, whoſe Sea-Armament they make to amount to no leſs than 30 Men of War. All this, ſay the French, is not for nothing; but we ſhall never know their Deſign, till we ſee the Courſe of their Expedition. With ſuch Talk as this do Men amuſe the Genius of a Nation always prone to believe any Thing that ſuits their Vanity! In a Word, all that is above we take to be coined for the Gout of the Nation; but I can tell you ſomething of a more ſure and ſerious Nature; to wit, That the Crown of France leaves no Stone unturn'd to gain over ſeveral Princes of Germany and Italy to her Intereſts. We know, for Inſtance, that ſhe has enter'd into a Contract with the Elector Palatine, and engaged to ſupport the Pretenſions of his Family againſt the King of Pruſſia, with Regard to the Duchies of Berg and Juliers. By this Means, ſhe is ſure of revenging herſelf upon the King of Pruſſia, who ſhews a greater Attachment to his Imperial Majeſty than that Court can away with. It is certain, on the other Hand, that France has likewiſe enter'd into Engagements with the new Prince of Monaco; and that his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty thinks himſelf by this Means capable of recovering his Authority in the States of Italy. We are told that Count Kinſki, the Emperor's Ambaſſador at Paris, has written to Count Sinzendorff, that the Keeper of the Seals had inſinuated to him in a private Converſation, that his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty would not be againſt entring into the Guaranty of the Pragmatical Sanction, provided that (in Caſe his Imperial Majeſty ſhould marry his eldeſt Daughter to the Duke of Lorrain, and procure him to be made King of the Romans) the Duchies of Lorrain and Bar be yielded to the Crown of France, and that the Auſtrian Netherlands be given in Sovereignty to Prince Charles of Lorrain.

Extract of a Letter from Cadiz, dated July 3. N. S.

My laſt was of the 26th ult. The ſame Evening, arriv'd here an Avizo, Capt. Juan Aburro, in 84 Days from Porto Bello, and laſt from the Havanna in 44 Days. Our laſt Letters by her are of the 1ſt of April, which adviſe that the Armada from Lima arriv'd at Panama the 15th of February, with 13 Millions and a half regiſtred, and a conſiderable Sum out of Regiſter; 3 ½ Millions for the King, Church, &c. and the 19 Millions for the Fair. Two Ships remain'd at Lima, and were to ſail 40 Days after the Armada, with what could be pick'd up in that Time, which is conjectur'd may be between three and four Millions, and with the Sums expected from Payta, Vallas, Guiaquil, &c. they reckoned would make up 20 Millions; that they had a Proſpect of a good Fair, notwithſtanding the Arrival of the South-Sea Company's Ship (Prince William) Part of the Treaſure was arrived at Porto Bello, and the Deputies of each Commerce were to meet in a few Days after the Departure of the Avizo, to agree on the Current Prices for Goods at the Fair, which they concluded would be all over in May, and the Galleons might return to Cartagena in June, and back here in October next.

Cargo of the Azogues expected from Vera Cruz, as regiſtred there.
